Brompton Quarter Brasserie

Just round the corner from South Kensington's museums sits the Brompton Quarter Brasserie, hugely popular with Knightsbridge's smart locals. The pretty upstairs dining room offers quirky chandeliers, an elegant yet friendly atmosphere and impeccable service. The food is absolutely excellent: unpretentious, and focusing on the freshest ingredients. Their Mediterranean sharing dishes are perfect for lunch while a Devon crab salad in Marie Rose sauce was sensational. Crispy duck with shallots, chilli, mint, coriander, pear and cucumber, wild mushroom tagliatelle and an impeccable melt-in-the-mouth steak were other stand-out dishes. And in keeping with its surroundings, until 20 Feb customers can visit the hugely acclaimed Shadow Catchers: Camera-less Photography at The V&A (p. 54) and enjoy a three-course lunch or dinner – at a very photogenic £28.95 per head. Booking essential.
